Creative Brief.

Background Information
Client Name	Daniel Goldin
Company	Boswell Books
Project	Rebrand Project

Project Overview

What's the problem to solve? Why are we making this?

The objective of this project is to find a way to rebrand a business's architype to something else. The goal is to make the rebrand still feel connected to the brand's history and goal while changing the way people connect to the brand. This rebranding will put a new and modern spin on the business to make it stand out more from other brands like it.
This architype change will change the feeling and tone of the store's image, bringing in different customers. Even though the branding of the store changed, they are still selling the same thing. We need to dive deep into the details of the company brand and dissect the brand's logo, mission, and values.

Client Biography / Background

Who is the client? What is their history?
The current owners of Boswell opened the store in 2009 after the old Casanova booksellers closed after 82 years of business. The new owner Daniel Goldin felt moved the store a block away from the original location to be closer to the academics and to start fresh.
Goldin has over 20 years of bookseller experience, so he knew what he wanted for the store. The reason as to why the store isn't a chain business is because he didn't want to run his resources thin and he could be at the store more often to have a more personal connection to the customers. The area is also very historical and draws a lot of people in who love history and learning. There is heavy foot traffic in the area which makes it easy for many people to stop in and look around out of curiosity. The interior is inviting and everything is clearly labeled, making it a very comfortable store to be in.

Strategic Objectives

Strategically, what are we trying to accomplish with this project?

With this project we are learning how to understand everything that goes into a brand and build the skills necessary to make an interesting and unique brand identity that is different from the chosen brand but still aligns with its purpose.
We will be changing the brand's logo, typography and color pallet to change the message behind the brand. These must all work together to make the rebrand still relate to the business.

Measures of Success

What determines our success? I.e. Lead Generation, Sales, Quick Turn-Around

Id say the most important thing that determines this business's success is being able to keep and maintain customer connections. In many interviews taken from the owner of the store, his main goal was to make it a place where someone could stay and feel comfortable for a long time. The store is connected to a large coffee shop chain which can also bring new people in as well.
Bringing people in for paid/unpaid events is also important for sales. There are many boards and flyers posted around the store to advertise author visits and other events. This keeps the store relevant and in people's minds. Store merchandise is also placed around the business. Anything from mugs to t-shirts with the brands logo is available. Even if you don't find the book you need, there is always something else to purchase that might pique your interest. Good merchandise designs make people feel excited about the store's image and history.

Target Audience

Who is our target audience? I.e. demographics, psychographics, and/or behavioral terms.

The main target audience for this business are people who enjoy learning and consuming physical media. The bookstore location is located in a place with heavy foot traffic, so it also caters to those who like exploring new stores and topics. The multiple author events also cater to avid book readers and the community of people who support that author.
The second demographic of people are students and other academics. Due to its close location to the campus and student living, the store is easily accessible to people who need books for a class. The store has many summaries and book recommendations written on the shelves themselves so that people don't have to waste as much time taking out the books. The calming and easy to navigate environment also makes it more desirable for people who have trouble in a typical crowed bookstore.

Think	Feel	Do
What do we want our audience to think? They should walk in the store and notice the store's values, whether it's from the welcoming environment to the numerous events that are hosted in the store.	What do we want our audience to feel? The audience should feel comfortable and stress free when in the store.	What do we want our audience to do? The audience should be able to easily navigate the store and find exactly what they are looking for. They should feel comfortable as they sit down in the coffee shop.

Single-Minded Proposition

A simple, powerful one-sentence statement that distills the purpose of the project & inspires creativity.

Where knowledge brings people together

Features	Benefits
What are the features? Features refer to physical qualities or tangible attributes. - Close to campus - Store layout - Knowledgeable staff - Flyers and extra labels	What is the corresponding benefit to each feature? - Accessible to college students. - Easy to walk around and not overwhelming. - Able to ask book recommendations or history about the store to an employee. - When customers are able to read recommendations about the books on the shelves, they save time and end up finding something they would have missed if they had to pick up each book to read the summary.

Tone

How should we sound?

The store should feel inviting and not overwhelming to be in. Doesn't have a corporation feel to it like big-chain bookstores and feel more intimate to each customer.

Mandatories

What are the must-haves? What should be avoided?

Must have constant updates on events and reminders of these events or activities posted around the store. Keep adding new events or merchandise to keep people interested.
Avoid
Not having a online site that is just as good as the in person store.

Deliverables & Formats

What are we making? What final files will be delivered?

We are remaking the identity of this brand by creating a new logo type and logo mark that is both digital and printed. A brand guideline that includes the mission, vision, values, brand archetype and target audience. Also, a style guide that includes the do's and don'ts of how to use the logo. The new identity will also need to have business cards, a website, and other ways to advertise the brand.

Additional Helpful Information

What are we making? What final files will be delivered?